

MONKEYING AROUND

Once in a lush green forest, there lived a mischievous monkey named Max who loved to jump and swing from tree to tree. He was always eager to show off his amazing jumps to his friends.

One day, while playing with his friends, Max
suddenly heard a loud
noise. Looking around,
he saw a big, round
yellow object hanging
from a tree.

Excited and curious,
Max immediately
jumped towards the
object and started
examining it closely.

His friends warned
him to stay away as they thought it might be a beehive.

But Max, being overly
confident, ignored
their warnings and
approached the object.

To his surprise, it was not a beehive but a big, juicy mango. Max quickly plucked the mango and started eating it, feeling proud of himself for being brave and smart.

However, while he was enjoying the mango,
another monkey came
by and claimed that the mango belonged to him.

Max, now feeling challenged, jumped onto a nearby branch and said that he found the mango first and it was his now.

The other monkey
then called his friends
and soon a whole
troop of monkeys
gathered, each
claiming the mango to be theirs.

Max, feeling
outnumbered, backed
away and started
looking for an escape.

Suddenly, a wise old monkey appeared and asked what the commotion was about.

The two monkeys told
their side of the story, each claiming the
mango to be rightfully theirs.

The wise monkey then asked Max where he found the mango. Max pointed towards the tree, but he was confused to see that the mango was no longer there.

The wise monkey then told Max that it was a trick by a group of mischievous monkeys who would often leave mangoes on the trees to see how others react.

Embarrassed and ashamed for jumping to conclusions, Max apologized to the other monkey and his friends for his behavior. He learned that it's important to listen to others and not make assumptions based on appearances.

From that day on, Max
became more humble
and thoughtful, and his friends were always happy to have him around.

The wise monkey also taught him that sometimes things are not always what they seem, and it's important to look at the bigger picture before jumping to conclusions.

Max's friends were proud of the change in him, and they all lived happily in the lush green forest, always remembering the lesson that Max had learned - not to jump to conclusions.

Don't be quick to judge
or make assumptions
based on appearances.
Take the time to gather
all the information
before jumping to conclusions.

Moral of the Story

Don't be quick to judge
or make assumptions
based on appearances.

Take the time to gather all the information before
jumping to conclusions.

The End.

The End.

MONKEYING AROUND

